Stockholm, September 25.

LAST Week the Order of Burghers ſent a Committee to the Houſe of the Nobles, with a Memorial wherein they repreſent, that whereas it was an eſtabliſhed Rule before Sovereignty was introduced in the Time of King Charles XI, that the Members of all the Courts or Colleges ſhould conſiſt half of Nobility and half of Commoners, thoſe Employments are now almoſt intirely engroſſed by the Nobility, there being at preſent very few Commoners in any of the Courts, and in ſome none at all: Wherefore the Burghers demand, that an Act may now be made to divide all the Courts again as they were formerly into two Claſſes, half Nobles and half Commoners, and that all the Vacancies which may henceforward happen ſhall be filled with the latter, till ſuch time as the Members become equal in every Court. This Memorial was received with Indignation by the Nobility, yet the Burghers were only told at the delivering it, that the Houſe of the Nobles would conſider of it, and ſend them an Anſwer in Writing as ſoon as poſſible. A Committee was accordingly appointed to draw it up with all Expedition; and on the 23d the ſaid Committee laid the Anſwer they had prepared before the whole Houſe, when it was unanimouſly approved: And Yeſterday a Committee of 36 of the Nobility were ſent, not only to carry that Anſwer to the Burghers, by which their Demand is rejected, but likewiſe to communicate the ſame to the Clergy and Peaſants at their reſpective Houſes.

Gobre, Oct. 18, N. S. The 13th Inſtant early in the Morning the King of Pruſſia went from Charlottenbourg to Potſdam, there to receive His Britannick Majeſty, who took Leave the ſame Morning of the Queen and Royal Family at Charlottenbourg, and about Nine a Clock ſet out for Potſdam, near which Place his Pruſſian Majeſty had ordered the Battallion of Great Grenadiers quartered there to be drawn up. They made a very fine Appearance, marched before their Majeſties, and then drew up, and performed the Exerciſe of advancing and retreating and firing by Plattoons, which they did with that Order and Dexterity that they fired above 10000 Shot in about 15 Minutes, each Man firing 14 times. Their Majeſties proceeding to Potſdam, paſſed through ſeveral of the Streets to the Palace. After Dinner His Britannick Majeſty took Chaiſe, and was accompanied a good Way out of Town by the King of Pruſſia with ſeveral of his General Officers on Horſeback. His Britannick Majeſty lay that Night at Fehrbellin, and the 14th came to this Place, having paſſed through Wuſterhauſen, Perleberg, and over the Elbe at the Ferry near Lentzen. His Majeſty arrived here at Ten at Night, extremely ſatisfied with His Reception at Berlin, and in perfect good Health. On the 16th His Majeſty, with Prince Frederick, and a great Number of the Court went out a Hunting. His Majeſty was out again a Hunting To-Day.
